Mosby, considered one of the finest jazz guitarists in the world, has played symphony halls, headlined jazz festivals, performed in concert venues, clubs, charity events across the globe, and was one of the first artists invited to perform in Russia following the end of the Cold War and Perestroika. A gifted guitarist, composer and improviser mastering multiple musical forms (jazz, classical and Indian raga), Mosby's broad musical spectrum evokes highly creative works. Says producer Ackerman, "Somehow he manages to synthesize these disparate elements into a singular musical voice that is that is unique in my experience and 'unique' is not a word I throw out easily or frequently."

"My goal as an artist is to introduce audiences to new hybrid forms of traditional and original music with the highest musical standards," says Mosby. "My mission as an artist is to connect with audiences at the spiritual, emotional and physical levels and as such, change lives."

Schooled in composition, guitar and improvisation at Berklee College of Music and live music performance with Tom Jackson Productions, Todd Mosby delivers a concert that engages audiences and takes them on a transformative musical journey.

Mosby made history as being the only guitarist to become a member of the famed Imdad Khani Gharana, India's royal family of sitar ustad musicians with an unbroken chain dating back 500 years. His music has been featured in numerous films, advertisements, and television shows including Run Away Girls, So You Think You Can Dance, and Runway Moms.

As Mosby explores a life of creative purposefulness, sharing his knowledge and innovations along the way, he is a seeker and learner who stays close to the transformative power of music. In all his pursuits, that's his missive.
